Three New York girls snowed-in at a flop house in Reno
Steam radiates long days, mom worked at the casino.
Scared, but safe in our fort under the bed,
Huddled, whispering all that was said.
Darkness brings Mommy home with a new name of Keno?

Slap in Face Halts Holdup

Somewhere in Reno today is a would-be bandit with a red face.

The face is red from embarrassment - and from a resounding slap dealt him by his intended victim.

Manning Hotel manager Russell Smith told police he heard the night bell ring outside his second floor office shortly after 4 a. m. He opened the top half of the Dutch door.

Confronting Smith was a short, heavy-set man about 50 years old. He wore a brown hat and brown topcoat and held one hand in the coat pocket simulating a pistol.

"This is a stickup," he said. But it wasn't. Smith shoved the man, then walloped him with an open-hand slap in the face.

The bandit left on the run.
